GALLATIN MAN ARRESTED CHARGED WITH STEALING FROM MAN IN NURSING HOME

The family of an 89 year old man, now in a nursing home, says the senior was taken advantage of by a man promising to sell their loved ones household belongings.

Adult Protective Services first got the family's complaint.

The state agency then referred the case to Gallatin police which opened up an investigation that lead to a grand jury indictment and arrest.

It all begins in May of this year, after an 89 year old man moved to an assisted living center.

According to Gallatin Police, the man's family decided to sell the senior's home furnishings and other belongings.

The family went on line and found a company that liquidates estate items. That company is run by James Dean.

The items include things from just about every room in the senior's home. Items listed by the police include a heavy oak table and high back chairs, an antique oak hutch with sideboard mirror, a full sized couch, dark brown leather recliner, a lift chair, coffee tables, end tables, floor lamps, pictures, antique iron, china cabinet, silver plate flatware set, a washer / dryer a chest of drawers, a bed a night stand, a butcher block table, walker, wheelchair and shop vac.

Police say, as each of the senior's possessions were sold on line, the family would receive 75% of the agreed upon price and James Dean would get 25%.

Then on April 16th, police say, the family receives their first and only check for $500 dollars.

In the check memo line it says FINAL PAYMENT.

The family tells police that is not the arrangement and the 89 year old's household items are valued at between 3-4 thousand dollars.

Lt. Lamar Ballard says James Dean talked to investigators about the case. "He actually used the excuse that Covid 19 caused him to bundle all of the items, and sell them for one price and the check he sent them in the mail was the total amount of the estate. During our investigation, we determined this was incorrect, that he still had some of the items, for sale. He didn't bundle the items. we indicted him for theft."

I call James Dean for his side of the story. After a moment, he hangs up with no comment.

According to Police, Dean did write a letter to the police that essentially says, the family is trying to squeeze money from him, he says some of the items the family gave to him are sub-standard, and he says above all else, it's a tough market in a Covid 19 world.

Meanwhile, Gallatin police say there could be other victims out there and would like to talk to anyone who may have had dealings with James Dean.
